

BROOKLYN.

ROLLEY MEN DEFIED POLICE.

Refused to Show a Permit or to Stop Digging.

Three Arrested After a Scrimmage with a Bluecoat.

There was a lively row shortly before midnight between a gang of laborers employed by the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company and several policemen of the Prospect Park squad.

The railroad men were trying to string wire across Ocean avenue, at Flatbush avenue. The Park Department refused to permit the work to go on.

A crowd of about twenty-five laborers and line men arrived outside the entrance to the Park at 11 o'clock last night when digging a hole to set up a trolley pole.

Policeman James Lonigan, of the Park Department, demanded to see a permit from the Department before he would allow the men to continue.

But the men refused to show him one, and the policeman directed the gang to proceed. Lonigan told them if they didn't cease operations he would arrest them.

Two of the men defied the policeman and stepped forward. Lonigan tried to stop them. Then several laborers grabbed the policeman and a struggle ensued.

Lonigan called for assistance, and several policemen who were on duty at the time arrived and broke up the fight.

The prisoners were Henry and Thomas Brockbank, of 1224 Atlantic avenue, and Henry Harris, of 1227 Atlantic avenue.

In the latter street Court today the men were charged with violating a city ordinance in erecting trolley poles without a permit. The case was adjourned until May 14.

The men claim they were working under a permit granted by the City Works Department on May 4, allowing the Company to erect four poles in Ocean avenue.

BURGLARS, SWINDLERS, ETC.

Brooklyn Police Kept Guessing by Man Petty Offenders.

Policeman Richter, of the Liberty avenue station, Brooklyn, saw two men hurrying along Liberty avenue at 4 o'clock this morning carrying two chests of tools.

He ordered them to halt and the men dropped their load and ran. After a short chase Richter captured Edward Meaney, twenty-five, of 195 Irving avenue. The tools were identified as having been taken from a new building at Sheridan and Liberty avenues.

Barbara Reiter, of 44 Beaver street, told the police to-day that burglars entered her home during her absence and stolen jewelry worth $125 worth of tools.

A man who has been swindling tradesmen by fraudulent checks was heard from again this morning. He ordered $15 worth of goods from Robert Lassa, a tailor, of 521 Court street, and directed that they be sent to the address lying at the foot of Court street.

Mr. Lassa, however, refused to do so, and got $5 change. The check proved to be worthless.

Thomas S. Knox, of 501 Atlantic avenue, notified the police to-day that a man who had been boarding at his house had departed with $125 worth of jewelry belonging to Mrs. Knox.

Charles and Sylvester Kilday, aged sixteen and seventeen, of 1227 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, were arrested this morning as they were trying to break into a stable on Washington street.

During the night thieves forced their way into the stable and stole a machine gun, 23 Third avenue, and stole brass fittings valued at $100.

Robert O'Connor, of 211 Ellery street, was sent to jail for ten days by Justice Connolly in the Lee Avenue Court.

O'Connor was charged with passing counterfeit money, to-day on a charge of intoxication. An additional charge against him of passing counterfeit money was referred to the United States authorities.

Up to two months ago O'Connor was employed in the electrical department of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad, but since then he has only been doing odd jobs.

On the night he went into the saloon at Flatbush avenue, he came out with a red half-dollar. As he came out he was arrested by Officer Duffy, who had noticed his suspicious conduct.

Duffy told him about one saloon to another.

MURDERER COIRO INSANE.

Garden Wants Him Removed from Raymond Street Jail.

Warden Shanley, of Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, notified the Commissioner of Charities this morning that Fredrico Coiro, the Italian accused of murder, was a raving maniac, and asked to have him removed to the Flatbush Asylum for the Insane.

Coiro is in a strait jacket. Every time a keeper passed his cell to-day, the Italian would shout for several minutes.

He believed he was being persecuted, and he believed he sees faces in the sky.

On March 11, Coiro, stabbed his son-in-law, Giuseppe Blass, to death in the hallway of the house 91 Clarkson avenue.

WHOLESALE VACCINATION.

Brooklyn Lanciers Swoop Down on the County Buildings.

Fifty doctors attached to Health Commissioner Emery's vaccinating corps and sixty policemen made a descent upon the houses near the county buildings at Flatbush last night and vaccinated between 200 and 300 persons.

The work was accomplished within an hour, and the doctors met with no opposition.

Two cases of small-pox were reported to the Health Department to-day. The patients, Susan Wilson, twenty-four, of Kingston avenue, and the city line, and Robert Gurney, forty-six, of 155 Water street, were removed to the hospital.

SMALL-SIZED BOYCOTT RIOT. SAY THEY CAN'T BE CENSORS.

Half a Hundred Williamsburg Men in a Street Fight.

Policemen Capture Two of the Participants.

There was a small-sized riot in Williamsburg last night, which, for the time, assumed a threatening aspect.

John Dixon conducted a saloon at Grand street and Wythe avenue, and sells Dubois beer, which the striking brewers have placed a boycott upon. He says that whenever women or children go into his place and get beer that the strikers hold them up outside, throw away the beer, and in many cases smash the pitcher.

James Ross lives next door to the saloon and has been much annoyed by the games of men who congregate in front of his place.

Last night there was a larger crowd than usual, and Ross went among them and expressed his opinion. In a moment there was the liveliest kind of a free fight. Half a dozen men were arrested. The street was blocked, and some one sent word of the riot to the Bedford avenue police station.

A patrol wagon full of policemen was sent to the scene. On their appearance the riot ended as rapidly as it had begun. Ross and John McElendon, of 223 Stagg street, were still fighting and were arrested. They were taken to the police station in the Lee Avenue Police Court and held.

The four boycotters denied the charge made against them. They insisted that they were arrested for no other reason than that they were standing in front of the saloon, and that they were not selling any beer.

In sentencing the prisoners, Justice Koch remarked that he was determined to break up the boycotting business, and that he would accept nothing but real estate bail.

REPUBLICAN PLANS BLOCKED.

Failed to Get a Quorum to Over-ride a Veto.

Assemblymen Arrested and Severely Reprimanded.

TRENTON, N. J., May 9.—The Republicans of the House this morning were unable to secure the presence of a sufficient number of Republicans to pass bills, and as a result 12 o'clock passed without Senate bill 127 being passed over the Governor's veto.

This bill was to legislate out of office at noon to-day the Board of Freeholders in Mercer, Camden and Passaic counties, and its failure to pass before that hour is held to make it inoperative.

The bill was passed over the Governor's veto in the Senate yesterday by the aid of Senator Perkins, and this morning when the House voted on it, the Republicans found they had not enough votes of their own in the House, they endeavored in vain to secure the assistance of the Democrats. It is believed now that it will be impossible to reorganize the Board, as it is thought that another bill cannot be put through before adjournment.

As the House was without a quorum, Speaker Holt this morning sent the officers for the absent members. Slinger and Olcott were arrested in the city and were brought before the bar of the House and severely reprimanded. Assemblymen Murphy, Harding and Eide are out of town, and they will be brought back as soon as possible.

The Governor's veto to the bill legislating out of office the Board of Freeholders in Essex and Hudson counties.
